Detroiters Declare That Play Will End In Their City In Four Contests

Motor City Anticipates Big Week End As Major Loop Clubs Arrive

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3—Cincinnati Redleg fans, somewhat bewildered by yesterday's 7 to 2 defeat of their favorites by the Detroit Tigers of the American League, streamed to Crosley Field today, confident the Reds would even the score.

Bucky Walters was to take the mound for the National League champs and fans were sure the Tigers would find the former third-baseman not so easy to hit. Schoolboy Rowe was to hurl for Detroit in the second game of the 1940 World Series.

Although the Rhineland was downcast last night, sentiment appeared to string along with the expression of Redleg Manager Bill McKechnie, who said that "tomorrow's another day."

Tigers fans who followed the junior league champs to the Ohio River city predicted the series would end in Detroit where the games shift after today. One Detroitr said the Red fans could gain some consolation from the fact that they'll be able "to cash refunds for sixth-game tickets" because "our Tigers will win in four straight."

The paid attendance to yesterday's game was 31,793, and club officials expected that many to wend their way through the turnstiles again today.

DETROIT, Oct. 3—Detroit baseball fans today were quite happy about the Tigers' initial World Series game victory over the Cincinnati Reds, but were quick to point out that the series is far from complete.

But some of the more jubilant reached down to pull up some cash and offered to bet that the American League representatives would sweep the classic in four straight. The more conservative fans, however, figured the series would go to five or six games, with Detroit proving the eventual winner, of course.

Meanwhile, the motor center of the nation went about its business of being strictly a "get all the work done in the morning" city. For come 1:30 p. m. and game time, it is rather futile to attempt to bother any one with such an unimportant thing as a business transaction. All ears at game time are glued to the radio and there they remain until the last man is out in the ninth inning.

With one game already in the bag for the Tigers, Detroit was anticipating one of its most gala weekends in years. The two teams return to Detroit tomorrow and play here through the week end.

The probable lineups for today:

FARM LABORER HITS EMPLOYER FOR REPRIMAND

TIFFIN, Oct. 3—As the victim lay near death, Sheriff Verne Deats said today that a 18-year-old farmhand, Donald Wagler, admitted bludgeoning his employer, Paul E. Schafer, 33, because the latter objected to Wagler being out too late in the Schafer car.

Suffering from a skull fracture and numerous bruises Schaefer was not expected to recover. Wagler already faces an attack charge which Sheriff Deats said would be changed to a more serious charge if Schafer dies.

Sheriff Deats said the young farmhand claimed that Schafer upbraided him when he returned at 1 a. m. with his employer's auto. After being chased from the house, Wagler said he picked up a club and struck Schafer when the latter called him names, according to the sheriff.

Schafer's two daughters, Emma Louise, 12, and Frances Eileen, 10, barricaded themselves in an upstairs rooms during the altercation.

AXIS PREPARING TO PUT SPAIN IN ENLARGED CAMP

BERLIN, Oct. 3—While the German press adopted an increasing antagonistic attitude toward the United States, the Rome-Berlin axis prepared today to carry out another diplomatic coup by bringing Spain squarely into the Nazi-Fascist camp.

(Editor's Note: In Rome it was announced that Spanish Interior Minister Ramon Serrano Suner's departure from Rome for Madrid had been postponed.

(Simultaneously Virginio Gayda, noted Fascist editor, wrote: "The axis nations are not impatient to end the war quickly. The current meetings are merely improving and coordinating their military plans. United States statesmen are halting at the brink and are not throwing themselves headlong into a great and dangerous adventure.")

Spain's new tie-up with the German-Italian-Japanese bloc is scheduled to take place with a gala demonstration in Rome, according to information in Berlin.

CHAMBERLAIN LEAVES CABINET

"Taunt Of Munich" Wiped Out As Minister Who Appeased Hitler Steps Out; Churchill Announces Other Important Changes

LONDON SHOWS MIXED REACTION

Lord Beaverbrook Expected To Play Greater Role In Affairs; Notes Changed By Two Leaders Of Isle Empire's Affairs

LONDON, Oct. 3 — Ailing in health, Neville Chamberlain finally bowed today to demands that he quit the British government and resigned as lord president of the council.

Confined to bed for the last several days, Chamberlain, peace-time apostle of appeasement who preceded Winston Churchill as prime minister, retired from the government amid a major governmental shake-up which included a further augmentation of the inner war cabinet.

The elderly ex-Birmingham manufacturer who negotiated the Munich Pact is expected to pass out of the political picture entirely. Observers believe he will soon resign as leader of the Conservative party, to be succeeded by Churchill.

In a letter to Churchill the out-going lord president of the council expressed full confidence that the prime minister would lead Britain to victory.

The first official announcement that Chamberlain was "out—climaxing months of agitation urging him to leave — produced a mixed reaction.

Munich Taint Gone

There were many expressions of regret, coupled with satisfaction that the "taint of Munich has been expurgated" and that Chamberlain's former appeasement policies no longer can be credited to a member of the government.

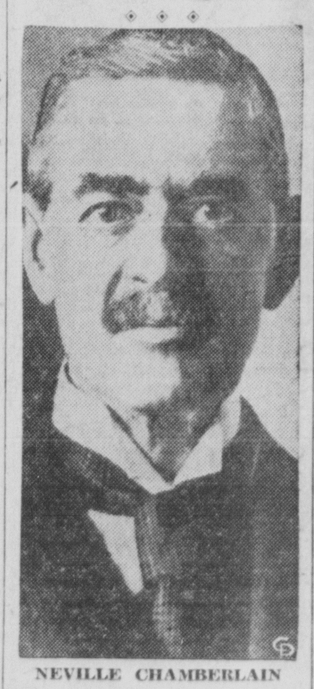

Political circles forecast that Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aircraft production and a member of the inner cabinet, henceforth will play an increasingly important part in prosecution of the war. Some believe he may be named deputy prime minister responsible for world propaganda.

Major Richard Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor party, remains as leader of the House of commons.

Additional cabinet changes are anticipated. Anthony Eden may eventually be replaced as war secretary.

Heretofore, however, Churchill

WILLKIE'S WIRE MAY AID YOUTH WHO FIRED EGGS

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 3—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, went to bat today for 14-year-old Robert French who was expelled from High school for assertedly tossing eggs at Willkie when the candidate appeared in Pontiac. It was recalled that Willkie himself was bounced from high school three times because of boyish pranks.

In a telegram to school officials, Willkie said:

"We have no feeling against the boy and I hope you can in your judgment lighten his punishment. He was probably more misled than offending."

While school authorities further considered French's case, Mayor George W. Booth produced a telegram signed by Willkie assuring that both the candidate and Mrs. Willkie have "nothing but the kindliest feeling toward Pontiac and the people of Pontiac."

ILLNESS CAUSES DELAY IN ORIENT SCHOOL HEARING

Because of the illness of C. A. Leist, attorney for the Scioto Township board of education, Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Thursday, postponed hearing the court suit between Orient parents requesting the reopening of the Orient school and the Scioto Township board.

The case may be heard next week, the judge said, not on the original petition filed by Orient parents requesting a mandamus action against the Scioto board, compelling it to reopen the school, but on the merits of a motion filed by the Scioto board to strike certain allegations from the original petition. In the board's motion it asks that the terms of the petition be made more definite and that the petition include the names of the parents of school children, their residences, and the

GAYDA OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR CYPRUS ANNEXATION

ROME, Oct. 3—What appeared to be a campaign for Italian occupation of Cyprus, British Mediterranean island, was opened today by Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, who wrote:

"The British government has destroyed the advantages of the long Venetian domination of Cyprus."

(Editor's Note: Cyprus is situated in the eastern Mediterranean and would be a valuable base for any concerted attempt to seize the Suez Canal.

(That Italy and Germany may be planning a major campaign against Suez for this winter was forseen yesterday in London, where military circles said that Germany has taken "de facto" control of Italian military operations in Egypt.)

Berlin Communique Reveals Destructive Blows To British Shipping

LONDON, Oct. 3—Striking despite unfavorable weather conditions strong forces of British bombers attacked military targets in Germany and Nazi-held territory, including communications, oil depots and invasion bases, the British Air Ministry announced today.

"Thick clouds and poor visibility hampered RAF bombing operations last night, but nevertheless strong forces continued attacks on military objectives in Germany and enemy-occupied territory," the announcement said.

"Points attacked included oil plants at Stettin, Hamburg and Bottrop, the Krupp works at Essen, goods yards at Cologne, the railway junction at Hamm, several enemy airdromes and docks at Hamburg and Wilhelmshaven and ports and shipping at Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Flushing, Ostend, Calais, Cherbourg and Ushant."

Following up the fierce counter-thrust of other British bombers which early Wednesday finished long night raids on Berlin as well as dozens of military targets along the French coast and within Germany, the fresh swarms of RAF warplanes took off just as Nazi airmen began their night attacks on Britain.

Convoy Attacked

Shortly before the new nightly assault on the Reich's invasion centers, British dive bombers and shore batteries had blasted a Nazi shipping convoy proceeding down the French coast, half hidden by heavy mists.

One German vessel was struck squarely by a British bomb and the entire convoy was put to flight by the concerted land and aerial barrage, despite protection by Nazi motor torpedo boats and fighter planes.

BERLIN, Oct. 3—Damaging blows to London's railway network, airdromes and shipping were announced today by the German high command in a statement which said:

"Attacks of the German Air Force yesterday once more were directed against London and numerous important objectives in southern and middle England.

"In London, extensive damage

A timely drama comes into the Radio Theatre on Monday, when Cecil B. DeMille presents George Brent, Olivia DeHavilland, and Johnny Payne in "Wings of the Navy." The intense story of U. S. Naval aviation will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m.

"Wings of the Navy" is the drama of a man who is spending his time designing a new fighter plane capable of an unheard of performance. Cass Harrington is his name and the part will be played by George Brent. With Olivia DeHavilland as Irene Dale and John Payne cast as Jerry Harrington, Cass' brother, this is the same trio of players who played in the movie original.

SHORT WAVE BEGINS

The forging of a powerful cultural link between the United States and its Latin American neighbors to the south will be officially completed on Saturdday, October 12, with the dedication of WLWO, international short wave station.

C. The first hour of the ceremonies will be relayed to listeners on the standard broadcasting band by WLW, from 8 to 9 p. m.

Final arrangements for the dedication were completed by Wilfred Guenther, WLWO general manager, on a trip last week to Washington. In addition to diplomatic representatives, whose names will be anonunced later, the speakers will include Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director-general of the Pan-American Union and Thomas Burke, chief of the communications division of the State Department. Representatives of the Federal Communications Commission also will appear on the 8 to 9 p. m. program over WLWO and WLW.

One of the youngsters, as yet not named, will act as a rapid-fire radio commentator in a news feature called "Breezy Bits From Boys Town."

The boys program will be followed, at 3:30 p. m. by the appearance of Father Flanagan himself at the microphone.

Fine Program Arranged For Fair At Atlanta

Livestock and poultry and products from the farm, garden and home, together with livestock judging, soil testing and afternoon and evening programs will constitute attractions at the Scioto Farms Project "Annifair", which will be conducted during the night of October 8, and the days and nights of October 9 and 10 at the Atlanta schoolhouse.

A report that the event had been postponed proved to be erroneous.

The livestock and poultry will be exhibited in tents on the school grounds, while the other exhibits will be shown in the old auditorium, and the Smith-Hughes Vocational Agriculture room in the school house.

Motion pictures, one act plays, original stunts and other local talent will constitute a part of each of the five programs. Each evening's program will be followed with a period of recreation including both round and square dancing under the leadership of Allen G. Brookover, Clarksburg.

The outstanding feature of the program the first night will be a one hour magical performance by Jack Thomas, magician.

Swine and cattle judging will take place on Wednesday beginning at 10:00 a. m. Professors Howard Davidson and Ivan McKellip, swine and dairy extension specialists at Ohio State University, will do the judging and will subsequently explain the reasons for their placings. During the afternoon of that day the two main features will be a talk on school lunches by Dr. Martha Koehne of the State Public Health Department and another on poultry production problems by Raymond Clay, Poultry Production Specialist at Ohio State University. Two leading numbers, in addition to the local talent contributions, on Wednesday night will be a motion picture film furnished by the Federal Bureau of Investigation entitled, "You can not get away with it", and an address by Rev. John J. Harbrecht, West Jefferson, Ohio.

On Thursday forenoon McKinley Kirk, Washington C. H., and Harley Mace, Clarksburg, 'will judge the horses, after which they will also preside at a horse pulling and horsemanship contest, which is due to be conducted at 11:00. On the afternoon of that day vocal, instrumental and other talent will be supplemented with an address on proper attire by Joy Hearn, Fashion Editor. That program will also include a home made garment revue which will feature attractive garments made at home from very inexpensive materials. The climax of the program will be a remote control contest, during which well trained horses will be directed through the difficult lanes of a specially prepared court by their masters with the use of the word of mouth only. The highlight of the Thursday evening program will be two professional vaudeville numbers. The first of these will be a group of comedy acrobats and the other will consist of a pack of trained dogs. On the same program P. G. Beck, National Director of the Farm Security Administration will deliver an address. At the conclusion of the program, there will be an auction sale of baked goods, soaps, sweets, etc., that were exhibited during the "Annifair."

The soil testing laboratory, furnished through the cooperation of the Ohio Agriculture Extension Service and the Wooster Agricultural Experiment Station, will be in operation through both Wednesday and Thursday.

All of the afternoon and evening programs are free with the exception of the last program on Thursday night, for which a nominal admission charge will be made.

The "Annifair" is sponsored by the folks on the Scioto Farms Project and others as a contribution to the public, which is cordially invited to participate in the exhibiting as well as the programs. Farmers wishing to take advantage of the soil testing laboratory should get further information either from a client on the Scioto Farms Project or the project office at Atlanta previous to the "Annifair."

The afternoon and evening programs will be held in the new gymnasium of the Atlanta schoolhouse. The programs will begin at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. respectively.

Army Wants Trainees For Duty At Earliest Date Possible

SPEEDUP IS REQUESTED

Volunteers May Make Up Big Part Of Contingent In Camp First

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 — In view of ever more troublesome world conditions, the army today served notice it wants its first contingent of trainees under the Conscription Act "early in November, or November 15 at the latest."

Previously actual mustering had not been expected to start until around December 1.

While no official announcements have been made, disclosures of the army's desire came as army sources also revealed further details of the induction process, together with probable localities to which the first groups of trainees will be sent.

The speedup request will require holding the great national lottery—in which the order the men will be called is to be determined—soon after registration day, now only 13 days hence.

After this the task of classification will start—but local boards will classify the men only far enough down on their lists to get the number for active service required under their local quota.

To Call 75,000

The army plans to call up only 75,000 men in November. These will be called in lots of 10,000 or 15,000 on successive days in order not to overcrowd the reception centers.

The next batch of 75,000 or so will not be called out for another month, under present plans. The final contingents to make up the first draft of 400,000 will not see service until early next spring.

Both army and draft board sources confidently expect the first two contingents, at least, to be composed of men who volunteer for the year's training. Thus, actual induction of men against their will, probably will not start until next year.

While some of the new recruits will be sent to various army posts and camps all over the country where men are needed, the bulk of the first batch can count on going to those places where the National Guard units were ordered on September 16, the army disclosed.

Except for small units at various harbor defense stations along the Atlantic coast, the "first call" of the guards has been ordered to just eight states. These are:

Texas: Camp Hulen and Fort Bliss; New Jersey: Fort Dix; South Carolina: Camp Jackson and Columbia; Virginia: State Camp; California: March Field and Camp McQuaide; Washington: Fort Lewis; Georgia: Savannah anti-aircraft firing station and Oklahoma: Fort Sill.

Guards to Handle Work

At these places the guardsmen will be waiting to take over the work of drilling elementary military principles into the recruits.

Most of the second contingent of trainees, due to being called in mid-winter, will go to the deep south. Preceding them to prepare the way will be the second group of National Guardsmen, ordered to report on October 16 to the following posts:

Fort McLellan, Ala.; Camp Shelby, Miss.; Camp Beauregard, La., and Meridian, Miss.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE BIG NEW ISSUE OF THE CAMPAIGN

I think this column was the first to state (on August 20th) that the Willkie campaign was heading for a slump. But it is now my belief that this curve has touched bottom and will move up. I believe the last two weeks before election will see more people decide for Willkie than during any other period. The reason is the political effect of conscription.

We will not argue whether peacetime conscription was necessary. It has been adopted by a majority vote in Congress and it is now a patriot's duty to support it as written. But what will happen to the boys after they are drafted is a question that is going to be asked in millions of homes between October 16th and November 5th. The Gallup poll showed around 45 percent of the people strongly opposed to conscription. That is a large minority. In it are millions of Democrats and Independents who have, on the whole, favored Mr. Roosevelt, and who would vote for him today on his present record if he were running for a second time and there were no conscription and no war.

PETTENGILL

We then come to the 55 percent who favored the draft in principle. But it is one thing to favor something in principle. It is another thing when it is brought home and you begin to doubt what will happen, not to soldier John Doe, but to your son, after he is once in the army. In the same way the great majority favor England or China, but not with their own flesh and blood.

On October 16th all men between 21 and 36 must register. In a city of 100,000 that means 15,000 young men, and the same 15 percent will run through every town, large or small. These 15,000 men have fathers and mothers. Some parents have died. But others have young wives or sweethearts. It is reasonable to assume that there are 30,000 close relatives of these 15,000 young men. That is a total of 45,000, or 45 percent.

These are all adults and therefore all voters. This one group of people is as large as the total vote.

Of course only a fraction of these young men will actually be called into military service. But who will be called will not be known until after election. So all of these 15,000 young men and their 30,000 fathers, mothers, wives and sweethearts will wonder whether the young man close to them will be conscripted or exempted; whether he must give up his job; whether persons dependent on him will lose his support.

This has nothing to do with their patriotism. They are all willing to defend this country if attacked. But they are overwhelmingly against having their own sons sent to Asia or Europe, perhaps never to come back.

Will they be sent — after the election? That question is going to come straight home to the very hearthsides of these 45,000 people. And there is one thing more important to people than Santa Claus, farm subsidies, social reform, or the New Deal. That is their sons.

Will these young men be sent to fight abroad? Can Candidate Roosevelt give an answer to that question which will satisfy these people—put their minds utterly at rest? He will promise them that he will not. But he has made other promises. How many has he kept?

Candidate Roosevelt has a record. This he cannot change. If these 45,000 voters now doubt his present answer it will be his fault, not theirs. Many of them have been lenient with his other broken promises but they will not be with this promise. On this they want to feel absolute conviction. Four years after this November is a long time.

What is that record? I will omit the 1932 party platform with its pledges which he adopted 100 percent. Nor will I mention his deceit in harboring a plan to pack the Supreme Court all through his campaign for a second term and saying nothing about it.

Let us examine his peace and war promises. The "quarantine" speech in Chicago in 1937, his repudiation of the "fool's gold" Chautauqua speech in 1936, the present urge to have war prosperity to postpone another collapse, his repeated statements that he will not recognize any military conquest. Is this a four-year commitment to Abyssinia, Albania, Austria, France and all the rest? His "stab-in-the-back" speech which could easily have brought war to us if Italy and Germany had been in a position to strike, and which they may later remember; his secret negotiations to sell the mosquito Fleet, in violation of law; his secret dealings with France before the embargo was repealed, as evidenced by the Douglas plane crashing in Arizona; his handing over the destroyers without the knowledge or consent of Congress, or of these 45,000 voters; his running mate's speech branding the Republican Party as the peace party, etc., etc.

In 1916 President Wilson's record had not put a question mark behind the statement, "He kept us out of war". Who will say there is no question mark today?

A lot of these people, in my judgment, are going to "play safe". Millions of them may like Mr. Roosevelt. They may not like Republicans as such. But the Republican record in Congress on conscription, and involvement in foreign war comes closer to the assurance they want than a third term and another New Deal Congress filled with howling dervishes, like Pepper, Lee, Smathers and all the other self-decorated policemen of the universe.

Big Man After Cadets

The tallest U. S. Army Recruiting Officer in the Fifth Corps Area is Sergeant Arthur Wright, Commander of the Zanesville, Ohio, Army Sub-station.

"You have to be a good man, but you mustn't be more than 74 inches tall if you wish to be a Flying Cadet," said Sergeant Wright as he "rared up" his full six feet six inches of elongation.

"Now get me right—I'm right and you're wrong if you don't think I'm right in giving the right figures about Flying Cadets' maximum right height," said Sergeant Wright. And Sergeant Wright just can't be wrong because he's had more than 20 years in the Army—and knows regulations and there's nothing wrong about that!

It is right that the maximum regulation height for a U. S. Army Flying Cadet is 74 inches. It is right that six feet six inches or 78 inches is the maximum height for enlistment in the other U. S. Army arms and services.

Sergeant Arthur Wright comes from a long line of soldiers. His grandfather and father served in the armed forces of Queen Victoria of England. He came to the United States with his parents when he was five years old. He enlisted in the U. S. Army at New York City in 1920, and has seen continuous service to date. He enjoys the distinction of being the tallest Army Recruiting Officer in the Fifth Corps Area—and possible in this country.

"Young men between the ages of 20 and 27, with two years of college credits or who can pass an equivalent scholastic examination, are offered exceptional opportunities in the United States Army," Sergeant Wright said. "Also, they must be unmarried citizens of the United States and in good physical condition. Flying Cadets draw $75 per month, plus $1 a day ration allowance, free clothing, equipment, quarters and medical and dental attention. Upon completion of a nine months' training course, Cadets are commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the U. S. Army Air Corps Reserve, and, if they are needed by the Government, continue for three years on active flying duty at a salary of $205 per month."

Sergeant Wright says that you can't do wrong in becoming an Army Flying Cadet—and Sergeant Wright is absolutely correct! You can't overlook a 78-in-tall Recruiting Sergeant—that is, not without a stepladder or something mighty tall!

WENDELL L. WILLKIE for PRESIDENT

A great Ohio newspaper, which has hitherto supported only Democratic candidates for President, said of the Republican nominee, Wendell L. Willkie: "His nomination came as the answer to a specific, if unspoken, demand for a man particularly trained to meet the problems which will face the administration at Washington in the next four years." Defend America for Americans. Defeat the third term. Elect a President fitted for the job. Vote for Wendell L. Willkie.

JOHN W. BRICKER for GOVERNOR

Ohio Needs Him

OHIO knows the costs in scandal, shame and money, of the political machine which had it by the throat from 1935 through 1938. Since that time, Governor John W. Bricker has restored both self-respect and solvency to state affairs by insisting on competence and common honesty throughout his administration. Voters now have the choice of either retaining Governor Bricker in office, or turning Ohio back to the same brazen crew from which he rescued it two years ago.

Recall the newspaper headlines during the previous administration:—the "hot-mix" mess, "truckless truckers" rake-off, "shakedown" and "chiseling" on state purchases, Senate graft probe, politics in old age pensions and countless other evidences of corrupt bungling. Compare this with the decent economical administration of John W. Bricker. Then decide!

HAROLD H. BURTON for U.S. SENATOR

Danger threatens America. Send a Republican Senator to Washington—a man experienced in public affairs and who strongly believes that the government belongs to the people instead of to an executive bureaucracy. Harold H. Burton has served his city, his state and his country with high public spirit. The great city of Cleveland has elected him Mayor for three consecutive terms. His record gives assurance that he will effectively serve Ohio and the nation in the United States Senate.

DAMAGING RAIDS MADE ON VITAL GERMAN PLANTS

Railway Junction At Hamm Struck; Nazis Report London Blasts

was wrought during the day to railway installations in the center of London as well as docks and harbor facilities on the Isle of Dogs.

"In several harbors in southern and middle England, direct bomb hits destroyed hangars and crew quarters as well as a number of airplanes on the ground. In some southern English ports—for instance at Swansea and Weymouth—hits by heavy caliber bombs caused large fires in factories, storehouses and oil tanks.

Freight Steamer Hit

"Off the southwestern tip of Ireland, one German fighter plane attacked a British freight steamer which was left behind. One direct hits was scored on the machine room, and the deck and cargo were set ablaze.

"One submarine commanded by First Lieutenant Jaenisch during a single enterprise sank eight armed enemy merchantmen totalling 42,000 tons. Thus First Lieutenant Jaenisch on two trips has destroyed 82,644 tons of shipping.

"Another submarine sank a 14,172 ton armed British merchantman, "The Patriot."

"A few enemy planes penetrated western and northern Germany on the border as well as German-occupied territory and dropped some bombs without causing military damage.

"At one place, a closed factory was hit.

"A few airplanes trying to approach Berlin were compelled by anti-aircraft fire to veer from their course. In North Berlin, anti-aircraft fire downed one British bombing plane which crashed to the ground in flames.

"The enemy yesterday lost a total of six planes. Seven of our own planes are missing.

"A group of fighting planes in a squadron commanded by Major Petersen, which already distinguished itself in the Norwegian campaign, has destroyed roughly 90,000 tons of enemy shipping during the last six weeks, and seriously damaged 40,000 tons, often venturing far out into the Atlantic executing daring low-diving attacks on strong convoys.

LONDON, Oct. 3—A few bursts of anti-aircraft fire in central London marked the 159th air raid of the war and the second daylight raid midway through the afternoon today.

No enemy planes could be heard and there was no sound of bombs exploding.

At the same time, it was reported enemy planes were over the British midlands and the southwest and northeast sections of England.

LONDON, Oct. 3—German reconnaissance-bombers droning through heavy rain clouds over London today sent residents of the British capital to the air raid shelters three times and managed to drop a few bombs on a western suburb.

Anti-aircraft fire and Royal Air Force fighter planes drove off the raiders before they could drop bombs in the first two alarms. But in the 160th raid the lone Nazi flier escaped a heavy barrage fire to drop his bombs.

While the London attacks were going on, other enemy planes were reported over northeastern and southwestern England and the midlands.

FORGERY CHARGES PUT AGAINST TWO YOUTHS

Two Huntington W. Va., youths, A. L. Harold, 19, and Willard Cotton, 16, charged with having cashed three forged checks in Circleville, pleaded guilty to forgery charges before Mayor William Cady, Wednesday afternoon, and were bound over to the grand jury on $2,000 bonds.

The youths were brought to Circleville Monday by Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver and Police Chief William McCrady, after Huntington police had been notified to hold the pair. The checks were passed when Harold and Cotton were working for farmers near Circleville during the corn cutting season, Deputy Sheriff Weaver said.

Marines Watch Shanghai Strike

Patrol streets

A general strike in the public works facilities of Shanghai, allegedly inspired by the Japanese to make it appear that American, French and other authorities in the French and International Settlements have lost control of the situation, has created a tense state of alarm in the metropolis. United States marines are standing by for emergency duty while police are attempting to quell the trouble. It also was reported that Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, has held five destroyers and a cruiser at Shanghai instead of allowing them to go to Manila where they had been scheduled to proceed.

CATCH BY TIGER MIDDLE FIELDER GAME'S FEATURE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3—Barney McCosky's great leaping catch of Frank McCormick's 385-foot drive to the centerfield fence in the first inning of the World Series opener yesterday was acclaimed today as "one of the greatest catches in world series history."

With Mike McCormick on second base by virtue of a double to right, Frank McCormick lashed a high liner towards the distant centerfield wall. Turning his back to the infield, McCosky raced back, leaped high, speared the ball in his gloved hand and bounced off the fence for the third Cincinnati out of the inning.

The applause was thunderous as the Detroit fielder trotted to the dugout. With that play, McCosky killed off a Red rally and set the stage for the Tigers' five-run uprising in the second.

BULLS SHOW STRENGTH IN DEFEATING BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 3—The Columbus Bulls today held a victory in the new organized American Professional Football League, a 17 to 0 win over the Boston Bears.

Sub Quarterback Jack La Bay led the Bulls to their first score by place-kicking a 43-yard field goal. A blocked kick and an intercepted pass led the way for the Bulls' two touchdowns in the last period.

Joe Aleskus, Columbus tackle, blocked Jerry Donnell's punt on Boston's 30 and Bell fell on it in the end zone. Johnson a few minutes later intercepted Donnell's pass and raced 20 yards for a score.

PICPOCKETS BUSY

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3—Extra police guards were posted at Crosley field for the second game of the world series today after reports of pickpockts were made and one suspect arrested. Victims of pickpockets at the first game were Frank Callahan, of Great Bend, Kan., who lost $173; Walter Dinkelman, Cincinnati, $30 and Russell O'Neill Cincinnati, $22.

ASHVILLE

George Bowers, down on the lower road in Walnut Township, is erecting a new frame dwelling and now is near the plastering stage. Bowers, besides building the new dwelling, operates the largest chicken farm in the county, we are told. Has thousands of the big type English Leghorns which produce many crates of eggs each day.

Contacted here the other day one John Courtright whom we had not met in several years although a local boy, a high school graduate here in the class of 1914, with Prof. Staley, superintendent. He is a son of our Alva and Mrs. Courtright. Is. and has been for several years head salesman for the Steam Shovel Works at Marion. Covers wide territory, much of his travel being by airplane. Was a resident of Chicago for several years.

A young squirrel is the latest arrival at the Cooper bird and animal home and hospital. It was bereft of its mother at the hands of a hunter a week ago and was kindly brought to the Cooper home for care and of which it is promised with the best which includes a nursing bottle with nipple and all and it is worth a lot to see this little gentleman busy tail perform at his meal. He is to be provided with a modern and sizeable cage. And while telling of this squirrel, we are pleased to say that those of the same specie, several of them, pets out in East Main Street territory, are yet alive and much admired by their caretaker.

John Sark, wife and Mrs. Blanche Morrison returned home Tuesday from Kansas City, where Mrs. Morrison had been the guest of her brother, Ralph Strader, for a few weeks. Mr. Strader was a local boy but has been in business in that Western city for a long while. Mr. Sark said that in their round trip they had traveled a distance of 1400 miles. And too, said that the corn crop in the section of Illinois and Missouri through which they passed, was much better than ours.

Ashville community will soon have a full-fledged airplane pilot if plans of Bill Sampson are not thwarted. Bill now has over six hours solo flying to his credit and when he gets to ten hours will be given his license. Bill, who incidentally, was graduated from nearby Walnut, is a member of the Piper Cub organization and does his flying at Port Columbus. He already knows how to take a plane up and land and his next training is to "stall" a ship, this being done by gunning at a sharp incline until the motor stalls. Mr. Sampson is interested in doing commercial flying. More power to you, Bill.

Has anybody heard from our canoist? Frank Williams is the boy we mean. You may recall Frank started out from Mackeford Bridge on the Scioto River west of Duvall one day in August and the last this writer heard from him was that he had reached Aberdeen, 44 miles down the river from Portsmouth. He is on his way by water to New Orleans where he plans to sell his canoe and return to this vicinity. More news about this one-man boat trip should be forthcoming shortly. Frank Williams, in case you have forgotten, is a graduate of Ashville High School and is now a law student at O. S. U.

CHAMBERLAIN RESIGNS POST

had steadfastly defended Chamberlain against his critics.

Chamberlain's departure from official life was accompanied by a widespread shift in the Churchill cabinet and a move which brought two of its most powerful members, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood into the inner war cabinet.

Anderson Appointed

In place of Chamberlain, Sir John Anderson, home secretary and minister of home security, was appointed lord president of the council.

Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, succeeded Sir John as home security minister, while Lord Cranborne, paymaster general, was named dominions secretary in place of Viscount Caldecote, who took another position.

Chamberlain's letter of resignation to Churchill declared ". . . unshaken confidence that under your leadership Britain . . . will succeed in overcoming the forces of barbarism which have reduced a great part of Europe to a condition little better than slavery."

In his reply Churchill said:

"The help you have given me . . . tided us through what may well prove the turning point of the war. You did all you could for victory."

At the same time the government appointed an advisory group of six eminent scientists to aid it in fighting a "total war."

They are Sir William Bragg, noted chemist, E. V. Appleton, an expert in physics and electricity, Sir Edward Mellanby, professor of physiology and expert on nutrition, A. V. Hill, who won the Nobel prize for medicine in 1922, Sir Edwin Butler, agricultural expert, and A. C. Egerton, professor of chemical technology at the imperial council of science.

The scientists were entrusted to bring to the notice of the war cabinet possible uses of any new developments in the field of science, ranging from improved methods of canning to new explosive formulas. In this capacity they will comb the world for inventions which might aid the British war effort.

ILLNESS CAUSES DELAY IN ORIENT SCHOOL HEARING

names of their children enrolled in the school during the 1939-1940 school year.

Since the 33 Orient school children involved in the controversy are now going to the Scioto Township school, Judge Terwilliger said he believed the need for a quick decision on the case had been averted. Next week's hearing on the defendant's motion will not determine whether the Orient school shall be reopened, the judge pointed out. It will merely test the validity of the defendant's motion to strike from the petition.

REMUS WINS AGAIN FOR SHORT AT UNION COUNTY

A new pacing record for the Marysville track was established in the 2:20 pace when Jackie Grattan, owned by Berry Farms, Butler, Pa., and piloted by Lacey, stepped the last two heats in 2:03-½. The previous record was 2:05.

The first event, the two-year-old pace, was won by Scott Emilee, owned by W. J. Michael, of Plain City.

JAPAN TO SEEK RUSSIAN PACT

Non-Aggression Agreement Possible; Indo-China Air Bases Planned

TOKYO, Oct. 3—Indication that Japan would make every effort to reach a non-aggression agreement with Soviet Russia was seen today in a press announcement that Lieutenant General Tatekawa, new ambassador to Moscow, had been granted extra authority.

Yomiuri Shimbun declared that this authority will place Tatekawa in the position of being able to reach a compromise on questions which hitherto have been in dispute between Russia and Japan.

The newspaper added that improvement in Russo-Japanese relations will give the recently signed tripartite pact between Germany, Italy and Japan even greater significance.

At the same time, it was announced that the Japanese high command had selected three sites in North Indo-China for air bases under the recently concluded agreement with the Hanoi government.

The airdromes are to be located at Gialam, Phuto and Phulangthuong, all points north of the River Song Koi. Japanese troops will occupy Gialam Friday.

Major General Raoshiro Sumita, sucessor to General Nishiwara—negotiator with Indo-China on the recently reached agreement—was expected to arrive in Hanoi Thursday. Sumita was formerly military attache at the Japanese embassy in Paris and later chief of the artillery academy at Tokyo.

NEW ATLANTIC PATROL SET UP BY U. S. FLEET

Extensive Maneuvers To Be Conducted In Caribbean During November

REVISIONS ARE DISCLOSED

More Than 125 Vessels To Be In Flotilla Aiding Eastern Defenses

WASHINGTON. Oct. 3—Extensive fleet maneuvers, augmented by Latin-American naval observers and a large force of U. S. marines, were planned by the navy today to test vital defense areas in the Caribbean.

This was disclosed as the naval high command announced formation of a new Atlantic warship patrol—a further step toward the projected two-ocean navy.

More than 125 vessels will make up the new Atlantic flotilla, which officially is to be known as the patrol force of the United States fleet. These ships will be drawn from the present Atlantic squadron, which is composed of several battleships, a few cruisers, some 50 destroyers and all the submarines now based in New England and other eastern stations.

Some of the ships soon to be completed also will be added to the Atlantic fleet. Virtually all the destroyers now in the Atlantic are overage and were recommissioned for the Western Hemisphere neutrality patrol.

Strenghtening East

Although the navy would say only that the move was for "more efficient operations," the creation of the new force is in accordance with the policy of increasing the strength of the eastern defenses as speedily as possible without weakening the power of the Pacific fleet.

A large portion of the new Atlantic force will participate in the forthcoming Caribbean maneuvers, which have been tentatively scheduled for November.

Although the navy has conducted fleet games in the Caribbean every year since 1932, the forthcoming operations in this area take on considerably more importance. From the maneuvers, the navy expects to obtain considerable tactical data involved in the problem of western hemisphere defense.

Latin-American governments will receive first hand reports of the operations through the presence of their naval observers, who will travel aboard the American warships.

The Caribbean maneuvers are a replica of the annual Pacific fleet games which involve all vessels of the main battle forces.

A large force of marines is being readied for the maneuvers. Next week, the First Marine Brigade, composing 2,900 officers and men, will leave Norfolk, Va., for Guantanamo, Cuba, for intensive training. The navy plans to utilize the marine corps for extensive winter maneuvers in the Caribbean.

ANNE LINDBERGH GIVES BIRTH TO LITTLE GIRL

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—The birth of her fourth child, a girl, and publication of her third book today provided two new milestones in the busy life of Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, wife of Charles A. Lindbergh, the famous flyer.

The infant girl weighed seven pounds and nine ounces at birth in Doctors Hospital. Dr. Everett M. Hawks of New York was attending physician. A rigid censorship was established at the hospital under an assumed name.

No name has yet been announced for the child, although she may be called Anne, for her mother, or Elizabeth, for her grandmother.

The first Lindbergh child, Charles Augustus, Jr., who would have been 10 now, was found dead in Hopewell, N. J., after his kidnaping by Bruno Richard Hauptmann in 1932. Hauptmann was executed. The other two Lindbergh children are Jon, 8, and Land M., 3.

All royalties from the book will be devoted to war relief through the American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker organization.

Hitler, according to an admirer, is a man who cannot be swayed from his set ideas. That's right—in spite of everything, he still wears that mustache.

The pause that refreshes

So, Germany Controls the Air!

GERMAN citizens often have heard the boasts of their leaders that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's air force controls the air over the British Isles, and they naturally assumed that Germany controlled her own air. In this picture, however, Berliners are shown gazing at proof that the Royal Air Force still is flying—a bomb crater in a Berlin street.

Cleveland Provides Big Show For GOP Nominee

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3—With the finest show he has yet experienced behind him, Wendell Willkie came to Pittsburgh today to make nine street corner speeches and a major address in Forbes Field baseball park.

After touring Michigan, warm toward his cause in some parts and hostile in others, Willkie arrived in Cleveland last night to encounter the most enthusiastic audiences he has found since the beginning of his campaign.

The Lake City which in 1932 and 1936 voted for President Roosevelt and voted Republican in 1938, met Willkie at Union Terminal with as many persons as could crowd into the building, lined the streets with an estimated 150,000 and poured 21,100 more — a capacity crowd—into the public auditorium to hear Willkie warn of the dangers to the United States in the Italian-German-Japanese mutual assistance pact recently concluded and declare that the New Deal is "playing politics with preparedness."

Congressman-at-Large George Bender who formerly was in the show business, stage-managed the auditorium show and with the assistance of Rep. Joe Martin, chairman of the national Republican committee, Governor John W. Bricker, Mayor Harold Burton and Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana built up an enthusiasm for the candidate's appearance unmatched in his political experience.

What the candidate had to say was what he had been saying in a series of train speeches through the state during the day but it was new and fresh to the audience and there were cheers for him in every punch line.

Willkie's speech on foreign policy, foreign affairs and national defense was of obvious interest to his auditors and consequently he delivered it with much more persuasion than he usually puts into a prepared speech.

In his speech, Willkie expressed the belief that the tri-partite pact "is aimed at the United States" and that the participating nations "are thinking of the United States in terms of war."

He developed the theme that "in the eyes of ruthless foreign states, we are neither a strong nation nor a great nation" and proposed "that we stop talking and go to work."

On the positive side, the presidential candidate pledged himself to aid Britain to the limit, "even if it means the sacrifice of some speed in building up our own air fleet," to coordinate the United States defense program with that of Canada, to work for economic cooperation with South America in order to drive out "the German Fifth Column" and to start immediately to build the defense program which, he charged, will take years to build adequately.

To night the candidate's major speech will be on labor.

He has already said that if elected he will change none of the beneifts gained by labor under the New Deal such as wages and hours legislation, collective bargaining and social security but that he will strengthen them all "through making the United States solvent and providing jobs."

His three point job program, expressed several times is:

1. Encourage industry;
2. Revise the tax structure;
3. Lessen government regulation.

ALBERT IMLER, WHISLER, DIES; RITES SATURDAY

Albert W. Imler, 76, a lifelong resident of the Whisler community, died Wednesday evening at his home. He had been in failing health for quite a while, having undergone a recent operation.

Surviving are his widow, Addalee Althaus Imler; a brother, Arthur, of Kingston R.F.D., and two daughters, Mrs. Grace Heskett of Akron and Mrs. E. C. Petty of Columbus. His first wife, Mrs. Gettie Whisler Imler, died in December, 1934.

The funeral will be Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Whisler Presbyterian Church, the Rev. L. V. Baugess in charge. Burial will be in Prairie View Cemetery, Whisler, by the Defenbaugh Funeral Home.

Washington Merry-Go Round

fire in inner Administration quarters, will be the target of some hot blasts by Wendell Willkie in his Pittsburgh speech tonight.

This will be the GOP nominee's major labor address, and it will be aimed chiefly at organized workers in the big industrial centers, with whom admittedly he is weak. Willkie considers the talk so important that he took more time and care preparing it than his acceptance speech.

Willkie strongly resents the recent attacks on his labor record as head of Commonwealth and Southern, particularly the scathing article in the "New Republic." His first impulse was to roll up his sleeves and deliver a slashing answer. But campaign advisers warned against it, urging that the best defense was a sizzling attack on the Administration.

Willkie accepted their judgment and will devote only a small part of his speech to his own labor record. Its main burden will be a caustic grilling of the New Deal's administration of its own labor laws.

He will charge that labor hasn't been given an adequate voice in agencies in which it is vitally interested. That is where Miss Perkins comes in. She may not be mentioned by name, for fear of offending the women's vote, but Willkie will leave no doubt whom he means. He will assert that her Labor Department is manned by "misfits" and others unacceptable to either the AFL or CIO.

Also, unless the text of the speech is changed, Willkie will promise that if elected he will appoint someone from the "ranks of labor" as Secretary of Labor, and give labor greater representation in other branches of the Government, such as the Social Security Board, Wage-Hour Division, etc. He will charge that these agencies are being run by college professors and theorists who don't understand labor's problems.

NOTE—One of the main collaborators on Willkie's speech was Lewis G. Hines, AFL Labor Commissioner of Pennsylvania and one of the campaign managers of Governor Arthur James. Hines' appointment as assistant to AFL carpenter boss "Big Bill" Hutcheson, chairman of the GOP labor campaign committee, soon will be announced.

LOCAL AIR BASES

The Army Air Corps isn't saying anything publicly, but it is making a quiet survey of all airports in the country for the purpose of locating new bases and training centers.

Objective behind the plan is to secure the greatest possible dispersion of air forces necessary for defense. Four cities already have been selected: New Orleans, West Palm Beach, Fla., Tallahassee, Fla., and Augusta, Ga.

The number of new bases planned is a secret, but they will cover the entire country with a network of air defenses. The Air Corps now leases fueling accommodations at certain commercial airports, but these facilities will be greatly expanded under the new program.

Also under consideration is the establishment of anti-aircraft defenses in strategic sections of the country. Home Guard oragnizations, to be set up under the bill pending in Congress, will play an important part in these plans. Many of the Home Guards, composed of older men, will be anti-aircraft units.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Democratic managers are quietly but firmly urging Roosevelt to make a campaign tour through the Middle West. Their private reports from this section are disquieting . . . . Bernarr MacFadden, health cultists, magazine owner and big Florida realty owner, may take another whirl for the Senate. He is angling with Florida GOP leaders to get his name on the party ballot against Democratic Senator Charles Andrews . . . . Senator Sheridan Downey, California isolationist, will go to bat for his hard-pressed Wisconsin isolationist buddy, Senator Bob LaFollette. Downey will spend two weeks in Wisconsin making speeches for "Young Bob." Downey is not declaring as yet what he will do as between Roosevelt and Willkie . . . . Indiana Governor Cliff Townsend, a dirt farmer with an earthy drawl, is being rushed by the Democratic command into Iowa, Nebraska and the Dakotas in an effort to stem the strong GOP tide in those states . . . . Lead article in the latest issue of The National Republican, edited by Representative George Bender of Ohio, is a scathing attack on the 50 destroyer swap for British bases. Bender asails it as a blow "at basic American traditions."

MAIL BAG

C. J., NASHVILLE—Representative Joseph Byrns, Jr., did vote for the conscription bill on the final ballot but fought it throughout the debate and supported every crippling amendment. His major speech against the measure won open praise from Republican leaders . . . . W. F. Q., MILWAUKEE—Representative John ("Fog Horn") Schafer was never a member of the Socialist Party. As a Wisconsin Assemblyman years ago he sat near the Socialist bloc, but had no party connection with them . . . . D. T., BOSTON—There were several reasons why Father Coughlin announced he would not go back on the air this fall. One was the refusal of all but a few small stations to sell him time; another was the code of the National Broadcasters Association barring harangues of his kind; and a third was the disapproval of his Church, which last February ordered him to confine himself to purely religious subjects.

BACK TO WORK

IN August 1,100,000 idle Americans got jobs. The figures are not in yet for September, but with the big business pick-up it seems likely that at least that many more were employed. And business keeps buzzing along at a steadily increasing rate. We might see several more millions absorbed into industry, trade and miscellaneous employment in the next few months. It is one of the most rapid upturns in our history, and the economic experts seem to expect a long rising curve of business volume.

Dollars, too, are going back to work. And the hiring of idle dollars is no less important than the hiring of men. When you put dollars to work, you put men to work. There has been so much idle money that the banks were choked with it. Now the more dollars are put to work, and the faster they move, the faster the wheels of industry and trade will turn.

While this present movement was started by war orders, it may outrun the cause and restore normal business activity in many areas where we haven't seen it for years. If so, it will be easier to pay for the armament.

REAL PAN-AMERICANISM

THAT "Havana Accord" aiming at a system of mutual assistance pacts for the 21 American nations seems to be getting a start now, and may develop into something worth while. The triple "Pact of Berlin" has had most of the publicity lately, but it may not be any more important than parallel developments in this hemisphere.

Old World dictators may be surprised just now to see seven military "missions" on the way from South American countries to the United States. They represent Argentina, Paraguay, Peru, Bolivia, Columbia, Uruguay and Guatemala. All of them are headed by high military officials representing their governments, and all of the other Latin-American governments are expected to send similar missions soon. They will tour the United States and see our important defenses and war preparations.

It is reassuring to Pan America in general that Brazil and Argentina, the strongest and richest of the Latin American states, are participating in these visits. They represent the first successful steps toward a united military defense program for the whole hemisphere. When the military experts of the "other Americas" actually see the vast preparations we are making to safeguard this New World, they may be expected to report it to their people and prepare to play their proper part.

LACK OF OIL REDUCES FEAR

WASHINGTON—One reason President Roosevelt and his naval advisers are not greatly perturbed about Japan's signing a formal alliance with Hitler and Mussolini is a confidential survey U. S. naval experts have made of the Japanese navy.

This reveals that Japanese warships only have on hand enough oil for about two and one-half months of warfare.

Japan gets its oil chiefly from California and the Dutch East Indies, having almost no supplies of its own. That, of course, is one reason she covets the Dutch East Indies. However, naval surveys also show that the capture of these islands will not be as easy as might be expected.

For the Dutch islands of Java and Sumatra have been preparing for the threat of Japanese invasion for two years. About twenty Dutch submarines are stationed in these waters, plus about 300 bombing planes, many of them purchased in the United States. Finally, the islands are well fortified with carefully concealed big guns.

Result is that military experts believe the Dutch could hold out again Japanese naval invaders for about four months. And during this time, Japan's oil supply, if embargoed by the United States, might become exhausted.

This may be one reason why the Japanese have made haste slowly in their contemplated plans for invasion of the Dutch East Indies. They did not want to move until they were sure first that Britain was in a desperate position in its fight with Hitler; and second, that the United States was worried about Europe and did not want to get its fleet preoccupied in the Pacific.

FISHING SAM RAYBURN

Pet hobby of Sam Rayburn is fishing. And when he was elevated to Speaker of the House of Representatives, a friend presented him with a handsome rod and reel.

Elated as a schoolboy with a new bicycle, Sam couldn't wait to try out the gift at a favorite angling spot in Chesapeake Bay. But his joy was short-lived. Hardly had he cast when a big bluefish snapped at the bait. In his anxiety to make the catch, Sam dropped the tackle overboard.

Ordinarily, Speaker Rayburn is an even-tempered man. He rarely blows up, but this was an exception. For the next five minutes the ozone sizzled as Sam, in unvarnished Texicana, deplored his ill-fortune. He was still grumbling about it the next day when he related his experience to colleagues.

Sam figured that was the end of the matter, but he was wrong. A few hours after the story got around, messengers from Washington sporting goods stores began arriving at his office, each bearing new fishing equipment. Before the day was over, seven rods and reels were received from sympathetic friends.

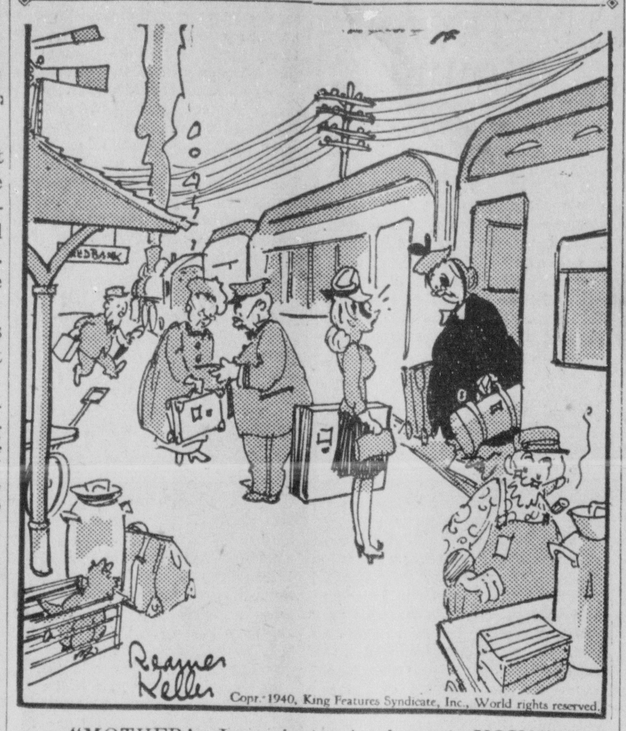

The last was brought in person by Representative Jack Cochran of Missouri. Rayburn wasn't in, so Cochran, grinning, left this message: "Tell Sam this is a non-sinkable rod."

DIET AND HEALTH

Breakfast Dodgers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● The American institution of breakfast, I am given to understand, is in danger of at least partial eclipse. The danger affects households where both parents work. There is little or no danger in this when there are no children, but with a school child in the household, authorities agree a serious problem may arise. Malnutrition in American school children of grade school age is much more frequent than supposed. The school child often cannot depend upon the likelihood of getting a nourishing lunch so breakfast becomes the mainstay of the nourishment for the early part—the hard working part—of the day. When both mother and father have to rush off to work early in the morning, leaving a child more or less to get breakfast for himself, the result is a badly balanced meal, mostly out of cans.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Breakfast Important

The school child's breakfast is the most important meal of the day. It should be hot, it should be nutritious and it should have a plentiful supply of fresh foods. It should include a fruit, a well-cooked oatmeal with cream and sugar, milk, and, possibly, eggs or meat.

Prunes, oranges, baked apples, applesauce, peaches, grapes, canteloupe, raspberries, toast, butter, cream of wheat, jam, graham crackers, jelly, cornmeal muffins, bacon, marmalade, fish, toasted corn flakes, cocoa, cracked wheat, wheatena, rice, puffed rice, farina, rolled oats, germea, hominy grits, chicken, wheat cakes, maple syrup, waffles, sorghum.

Parents' Chore

If you, the parents, see to it that your children have a good variety of those things for breakfast, you need not worry.

What the school dietitians are up against is the malnutrition of school children due to the carelessness and indifference of parents.

Take charge of the breakfast of a nation and you may be indifferent to who makes the laws or the songs either.

Malnutrition in children of the school age is a very common cause of deficiency in scholarship. In its early and less developed forms it is not always easy to detect. It frequently goes without recognition for a long time because the child is less under rigid supervision at this age than he was when younger.

Early recognition is, however, important, and the energies of health and school authorities are being directed more and more to this end.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. N.—"What are the causes and cures of impetigo?"

Answer—Impetigo is a pus infection of the skin around the nose and mouth, usually occurring in infants. It is caused by the ordinary pus germs, staphylococcus and streptococcus. Due to scratching and handling it may spread very rapidly and widely and become very serious. Treatment is first to restrain the infant's hands and arms to prevent this scratching. Local treatment consists in the use of ammoniated mercury ointment. The scabs may be softened and removed with sterile olive oil and sterile dressings should be applied. In a serious case, however, it is no disease for an amateur to tackle. A doctor should be consulted.

Ketogenic Diet—Many requests have come in for a prescription for the ketogenic diet for epilepsy. In general, it consists in high fat and low starch: concentrated sugars such as candy, and desserts, are prohibited. Exact prescriptions cannot be calculated unless age and weight are known, and should be ordered by a physician. It is best to consult the physician anyway to determine whether the condition really is epilepsy. The function of this column is not to teach people to treat themselves, but to teach them what their doctors can do for them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin".

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

GUN'S GUARD awaited him outside. But as they turned to move away Gun caught, through the closed window, the murmur of voices. In the room he had just left, Otto was speaking.

"Just a minute," said Gun to the guard.

He bent as though to do up his shoe lace, and in doing so leaned quite naturally against the wooden wall of the bungalow. Otto was saying:

"This appliance of Hazeldeane's will be valuable in many ways. It can be sold—or maybe it will be useful in possible future operations. But for this we cannot wait—this coup of ours must come off on the 25th at the latest."

The guard made an impatient movement.

"All right," said Gun, straightening himself. "Off we go!"

He had heard enough. The crime was to be perpetrated on the 25th, and it was now the 10th. So he had fifteen days in which to make his escape, if he was to prevent one of the vilest crimes which had ever been planned for gain.

When Tommy Hazeldeane heard the news he chuckled delightedly.

"Why, that's better. A good meal and a drink and a pretty girl—what in hell does a man want more than that? But, I say, we'll have to have a wash and brush up first, you know!"

"Oh, I don't doubt they'll provide for that," Gun answered dryly. Tommy's "live for the moment only" attitude annoyed him, in the circumstances, so that he had half a mind to tell him the truth. But he was still fearful of Tommy's impetuousness.

Trent conveyed the news officially (Gun, of course, not being supposed to know anything about it) the following morning, and shortly afterward they were allowed back in the bungalow, where they found Sambo installed once more in the kitchen, and the hot water functioning again. They both immediately reveled in hot baths and shaves and, in the end, looked something more like themselves again—though both needed a haircut, and their suits showed considerable signs of wear and tear.

The dinner party, as such, was a success. Coral was the life and soul of the party, and Tommy backed her up well. Trent and Gun both did their best, and even Otto seemed to relax a little.

But over the coffee and liqueurs Otto suddenly came to business.

"Let us not beat about the bush, gentlemen. You have some knowledge which we require—WHY, doesn't matter at all to you. For this we are prepared to pay. We will pay for it twenty-five thousand pounds, which you can divide between you as you think fit. And we will send you to America, or anywhere you like at our own expense. If you refuse—then I am afraid we shall have to make things even more uncomfortable for you than they have been hitherto. I am not, it seems, so gentle and refined as my friend Trent here—and I have methods of—shall we say physical persuasion?—which I think will be effective. If not, we shall have to shoot you. Which will be a pity. Now, I want you to think this over carefully."

Coral broke in:

"Why, it doesn't want any thinking over, does it, big boy?" She was addressing Tommy. "Gee, you could do a lot with your share of twenty-five thousand smackers! And if you wanted any help in spending 'em, I guess I could show you a thing or two—in New York. O boy! O boy!"

It was all rather crude and blatant, and Otto frowned. But before he could say anything there came a tap at the door, which Trent answered. He spoke to someone outside, and then turned to Otto.

"Afraid you and I will have to run over the road for a few minutes, Chief. There's something needs our attention. But we needn't be long."

He looked inquiringly at Coral, who immediately responded:

"Oh, that's all right with me! I'll stay here and wait for you! I guess these two boys will look after me."

"Oh, rather!" cried Tommy, gallantly.

"Very good, then. Let's go," said Otto, and the two men went out.

Gun felt a little excited. He had already decided that he would sound this girl as to what she knew of the gang's plans. If, as he suspected, she was not aware of the full extent of their ruthless villainy, she might yet, in her revulsion of feeling, prove an invaluable ally. She might be a tough case, he thought, but it was difficult to regard her as a human monster—which she certainly would be if she were a party to this plot, the full extent of which, he believed, only he knew.

For a few moments after the departure of Trent and Otto silence reigned. Then Coral spoke in a low voice:

"Now," she said—and she was looking at Gun, and not Tommy. "I want to talk to you two."

"It's not safe to talk here," put in Gun, quickly. "I have notions of concealed microphones. Let's walk in the garden. You have a wrap, haven't you?"

She pointed to where it lay over a chair, and he got it for her. Then they went out into the faintly moonlit garden, and walked on to the lawn where they were safe from eavesdroppers.

Gun was just thinking how to frame his opening, when Coral took the wind completely out of his sails.

"I suppose"—again she was addressing Gun—"you think I'm a pretty tough proposition."

Gun was conscious that her voice had changed, and that she was speaking once more in the soft, low tones he had heard once before.

"Well, that's rather a leading question, isn't it?"

She laughed softly.

"Oh, I don't mind what you say, because, you see, really I'm not so tough—at least, not in the way you think. Now, let me tell you something—they call you Mr. Gunston here, don't they? And they think you are Commander Hazeldeane's assistant? But, really, you are in quite a different business, and your real name is Cotton, isn't it?"

Gun was suddenly very much on his guard. So, in some way, they suspected his real identity, and this girl was to trick him into admitting it?

"You'll forgive me," he said. "But I don't quite understand. Who is Mr. Cotton?"

"Why you are, of course! Now, don't be silly about it—you see, I'm a friend, actually."

"I'm glad to hear that," retorted Gun. "But I feel that you must be very clever at disguises, and dissembling, and all that sort of thing. As for this Mr. Cotton—well, I'm sorry to disappoint you, but I'm afraid I've never heard of him."

The girl chuckled again, rather surprisingly.

"You do it very well, you know," she said. "But really, it's a wasted effort. You'll tell me next that you have never heard of—X."

Gun was becoming more and more astonished. Assuredly these people—this girl—knew quite a lot. But he answered, in a semi-bantering tone:

"Well, I can't say that, you know. It's the twenty-fourth letter of the alphabet—and a useful alias for gentlemen who get mixed up in sticky blackmail cases."

"And it is also," said the girl, quietly, "a useful alias for the man who is your chief—and mine."

"Very interesting, I'm sure," Gun countered. "But I still don't know what you're talking about, I'm afraid."

The girl was grave now, for she realized what was in Gun's mind.

"I assure you, Mr. Cotton," she said, seriously, "that you're being overcautious. I am myself one of X's people, officially known, by the way, as No. 23. And part of my business here is to find you, and to give you any possible assistance you may need. But if you won't believe me, it puts us both in rather a mess, doesn't it?"

"It isn't a question of not believing, I promise you, Miss Coral," said Gun, with the utmost politeness. "It is merely that I am afraid that I haven't the least notion of what you're talking about, that's all. And now, if you'll excuse me, I think I hear our—ahem—guests returning, so I think I'd better join them."

Gun turned abruptly on his heel, and walked back to the bungalow with his mind in something of a whirl. If the girl was an impostor—and how could she be anything else, in view of what he and Prescott had seen—how the devil did she get to know as much as she had? Was if possible that he had run up against her at some other time, when engaged on some other business, and that she had recognized him, or thought she had?

So far as he could see there was only one comforting thing about it. He had not given himself away at all, and if it was only suspicion?

He went into the empty room and flung himself into a chair. He poured himself out a whiskey and soda, and lit a cigaret. And it was just as he sent the first puff of blue smoke curling—ceilingward that a rather startling thought came to him:

If this girl knew him, or suspected that she knew him, why had she approached him, instead of going to Otto or Trent, who would have had no hesitation in cutting on the merest suspicion that he was a secret agent?

If, on the other hand, her story was true, he was deliberately throwing away his great chance of getting the better of the gang.

And, in any case, even if she was one of the gang, the fact that she had approached him direct argued that she was, to some degree, his friend.

Feverishly he sought in his mind for some theory that would account for the situation if what she had said was true. And almost instantly he hit on one.

X's confounded habit of never letting his right hand know what his left was doing. It wouldn't be the first time he had found people who were complete strangers to him working on the same job as himself.

He remembered then how X had shown that he knew quite a lot about Pullinger when he first went to him with the story. Of course, that could have come from this girl. The fact that she was with Otto, and that she had been to Watson's house, could mean nothing more than that she was working on X's behalf.

Gun realized fully what a thin chance he had of getting free in time to stop the crime that was contemplated by the gang without outside assistance. He suddenly made up his mind that he would take a chance on it. After all, he might just as well. It seemed about the only chance, and even if the girl betrayed him, he might as well be dead as useless.

Confound it, he'd do it—right away.

He got to his feet and was just moving to the door to go and find the others when the door itself was thrust open and Otto and Trent stood on the threshold.

"Hullo!" said Trent. "Where are the others?"

"In the garden—according to program," Gun answered.

"Good!" said Trent. "Let's hope she's having some luck with your rather difficult friend."

Otto nodded, and grunted a sort of "Amen."

As they came into the room Gun was thinking how he could possibly get one word with Coral to let her know that he was prepared to trust her. He got an idea.

"Shall I go out and fetch them in?" he asked.

Otto shot a quick glance at him, that might have been one of suspicion. Otto was the sort of man who was suspicious of almost everything.

"No," he said shortly. "In a minute I will call out to them myself. Better give them time."

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up early to get a few chores out of the way before heading the wagon toward Cincinnati and World Series opener. Little traffic and all of it fast on the way down and did find Rhineland taking the big event in stride. Parked the car, ate lunch within the block and then to the park by bus.

Supposed to be a lot of color at a Series opener, but to me it was woefully lacking. The Reds came out for batting practice and then the Tigers. A few balls over the fence. Jim Farley came in and sat not far away. Martin Davey noted him and came over for a twosome picture. Big and little men arrived. Saw Jess Andrews, the famed sheep man, from over Indiana way. A factory worker sat at my left. Wondered how the boys in the bleachers felt after their night long wait for places.

Saw Mickey Rooney, Joe E. Brown and Tony Martin in a glare of flashlights and hemmed in by a great ring of amateur movie takers. Others of fame also were there, but most of them too far away for identification.

Great work by Paul Derringer in the opening frame, and the Reds in their half rapped the ball soundly, but their threat was halted by both good and lucky fielding. Then came the second and a procession of Tiger runs over the plate. Right then I decided that if I were a baseball manager I would rather have a man who can rap the apple and who might make a few errors afield than a perfect fielder who generally is out before he goes to the plate.

Billy Myers was the goat of the opener, at one time having Hank Greenberg a score of feet off second and failing to make a throw and later having another certain out at second and dropping the ball. He even took a third strike at a crucial period with his bat on his shoulder.

From this point on anyone can have my share of World Series games. I saw the two at Cincinnati last year and the opener this year. For color and plenty of it and a continuation of real thrills I'll take Ohio State's football team and the crowd that packs the stadium.

Wonder why the Columbus sport writers are making so much of Purdue. To read them one would think that the Boilermakers have one of the strongest teams in the nation this year. As a matter of fact, Purdue has only three letter men on the squad this year, having lost more than a score of regulars by graduation last Spring. Much also is made of the defeat of Butler by Purdue. Why, Shortridge high school in Indianapolis has more students than attend Butler. The Purdue team is fast, as it always is, but unless Ohio defeats it Saturday the Bucks might just as well abandon all hopes of finishing near the Conference top.

Greenfield's Squad, Minus Star Center, Hard at Work for Invasion by Tigers

By Pat Schrock

GREENFIELD, Oct. 3—The satisfaction of a deserved 19-6 decision over London's Big Red Raiders last Friday night for their third consecutive victory of the 1940 campaign was dulled for McClain Tigers this week by the loss of Ralph Kerns Jr., scrappy litle varsity center whose broken collarbone will bench him for the balance of the season.

Kerns, whom Coach Gerald "Red" Armstrong considers "one of the best footballers McClain ever had," tips the scales only at 129 pounds, but madeup in spunk and hardwork what he lacked in much desired football avoirdupois.

Finding a replacement for Kerns at the pivot post is the big task confronting Coach Armstrong and his assistants as they drill the Purple and Gold for the important tussle with Circleville here Friday night, the first South Central League contest of the season for both elevens.

Early this week the Tiger mentor woud not commit himself as to a probable starter at center against the Round Towners. "The place is wide open," was his only comment as he looked worriedly over several lads who are without actual game experience much less any especial ability for that all-important spot.

Assistant Coach Tom Doyle, who scouted Circleville against Lancaster last Friday night, is dealing out words of wisdom in telling McClain that "Coach Black really has a good ball team. They actually outplayed Lancaster and it was just Lancaster's preponderance in size and weight that finally wore down Circleville."

In fact, Doyle goes so far as to opine that this year's Round Town eleven is better than the team that walloped McClain a season ago.

The Purple and Gold, however, will be out to keep intact their perfect record at the expense of Friday night's visitors, and Eldon Newland & Co. are justly confident of their ability to hang up the long end of the score. It isn't over-confidence. It's just a healthy faith in themselves and their coaching staff.

Squad Knows Task

The squad is listening gravely to Doyle's warnings and is buckling down to the task at hand in full earnest.

Most of the varsity came out of the hard-fought London tilt in pretty fair physical condition, and Coach Armstrong is watching them carefully to prevent in so far as possible any untoward bumps or bruises.

Except for center, the same varsity will likely take the field against Circleville that measured London, to wit:

Morgan and Stewart, ends; Jim Orr and Newell, tackles; Jury and Clements, guards; Newland, quarterback; Schmidt and Grate at the halves; Paul Orr, fullback.

Greenfield fans are anticipating not only the ball game but the appearance on McClain Field of the fine Circleville High school band which is newly uniformed this fall. The McClain band, under the direction for the second year of Maurice King, is making rapid strides in perfecting its field maneuvers and improving its music-making. Although still small in numbers, the tunesemble has made a decided hit in its two home appearances and at London.

Newland Leads

McClain defeated Clarksburg in the opener, 63-0, and measured North College Hill, of Cincinnati, 33-7, before invading London the past week. Newland has crossed the double-stripe ten times to lead the team in scoring.

CHICAGO SERIES EVEN AS OLSEN WINS OVER SOX

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—The Chicago city baseball series moves from Wrigley Field over to Comiskey Park tonight with the National League Cubs and American League White Sox tied at one game each.

Playing in their own park for the first time in the series, the Sox tonight will match Southpaw Larry French of the Cubs with a lefty of their own, Edgar Smith. Thus the game will be another southpaw duel, as was yesterday's contest which the Cubs won by 8 to 2. The Sox won the series opener, 5-3.

Vern Olsen pitched yesterday's win for the Bruins, limiting the Sox to seven hits while the National Leaguers teed off against Thornton Lee, the starting pitcher, and Pete Appleton, for nine safeties. Despite Olsen's pitching magic, however, it was the Sox own misplays which accounted in large measure for the result. The Pale Hose committed five errors, all with cost, and otherwise did everything possible not to win.

FOOTBALL DISH FILLED IN MANY PARTS OF NATION

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—The college chefs have cooked up some tempting gridiron dishes to appease the voracious appetites of the football fans in every section.

Down South, for instance, the fans will have a hard time deciding whether they would rather take in the Duke-Tennessee game or take a whirl at Holy Cross-L.S.U. or Tulane-Auburn.

In the East the most tempting games are Cornell-Colgate, Fordham-West Virginia, Georgetown-Temple, Manhattan-George Washington, Pitt-Missouri, Northwestern-Syracuse, Princeton-Vanderbilt and Virginia-Yale.

In the West Notre Dame will be unveiled against College of the Pacific. Then there are the Texas-Indiana, Marquette-Wisconsin, Nebraska-Minnesota and Ohio State-Purdue battles to appeal to the most exacting seeker of thrills.

In the Southwest Texas Christian tackles Arkansas and the champion Texas Aggies take on Tulsa.

Out in the Far West we have Santa Clara tangling with U.C.L.A., Southern California with Oregon State, Stanford with Oregon and St. Mary's with California.

And just to get the shock over as quickly as possible, we are picking the first named to win in each of the aforementioned games.

NEWARK BLASTS COLONELS FOR 10 TO 3 MARGIN

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3—Louisville's Colonels, one game down to Newark in the "Little World Series," called on Right-hander Jim Weaver for tonight's second game in the series in the hope "Big Jim" will be able to silence the Bears' big bats.

In last night's series opener before a crowd of 7,700, the International League champions blasted three Louisville pitchers for 15 hits, including two homers, to win by a score of 10 to 3. George Washburn pitched all the way for Newark, limiting the Colonels, winners of the American Association playoffs, to six hits. One of the local nine's hits was a homer by Artie Parks, left fielder.

Against Weaver, the Bears planned to pitch Steve Peek, also a righthander, while going after their second victory. The series goes to the first team to win four games.

HOPE OF REDS GOES ON BUCKY WALTERS' ARM

Sinker Ball Pitcher To Take Mound After Big Derringer Fails

DEFENSE FALLS APART

Buck Newsom Strong During Entire Nine Inning Initial Joust

By Lawton Carver

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3—The sinking hopes of the Cincinnati Reds rode today on the sinker ball of Bucky Walters, a reformed third baseman who opposed Schoolboy Rowe of the Detroit Tigers in the second game of the World Series. By this time everything depended on Walters, who was confronted by the task of evening the series at one-all or giving the Tigers a two-game edge that probably could never be surmounted.

Having won the opener yesterday by 7 to 2, the Tigers were ready to adjourn after today's game to their own ball park at Detroit for the next three with the chance to sew this one up quickly and even the most rabid Cincinnati fan had begun to recognize the hand-writing on the outfield walls. Paul Derringer was blasted out in less than two innings yesterday. That means the Reds' mainstay couldn't win. So what about the rest?

Briefly, the Tigers were to come in there today with the redoubtable Schoolboy Rowe, the erstwhile lame arm who is ready to go again, and carry on where the equally redoubtable Buck Newsom left off yesterday. Buck pitched an eight-hitter which was spoiled only by propitious singles by Jimmy Ripple and Ival Goodman behind the doubles of Goodman and Bill Werber for the Reds' only runs by a patched up line-up that included old James Wilson behind the bat, and weak Eddie Joost at second base.

Reds Defense Cracks

In the midst of the Reds' pitching debacle, which contributed to make this the least inspiring of all recent World Series games, the Reds' famed defense cracked wide open and by now the only question seemed to be whether the Tigers would win four straight from the Reds as the Yankees did last year or be carried a little farther along.

The Reds didn't hit yesterday, which was as expected, but more important, they didn't field or pitch either, and that is the story of the opener.

More amazing than all that is this from Derringer: "I never had more stuff in any game in my life. I had plenty of speed, a good curve and I was putting the ball right where I wanted it."

Despite the explanation, he was lifted in the second innig with five runs over and Whitey Moore went along until finally they took him out for a pinch-hitter and finished with Elmer Riddle, who hurled the last inning.

Through it all, Louie (Buck, Bo-Bo) Newsom was giving them his idea of big league pitching and winning his only World Series start, after having captured 21 victories during the last season when the Tigers came on from a fifth place finish in 1939 to the American League pennant. Newsom gave Hartsville, S. C., something to cheer about and predicted quite freely that he would win another game before this thing finally is settled.

Council Hits Snag in Effort To Set Up Disposal Rates

Industrial Leaders File Objections To Schedule Being Proposed

MORE TIME IS NEEDED

30 Sign Petition Hitting Smoke Nuisance In Uptown District

Unable to reach a satisfactory agreement with four Circleville industries on sewage disposal rates, Council Wednesday evening decided to postpone action on the ordinance until November 6.

In the mean time, officials of the Container Corporation, the Winorr Canning Company, the Esmeralda Canning Company and the Pickaway Dairy will study their sewage problems and submit to Council what they think are fair and equitable rates for their respective plants.

At Wednesday night's meeting officials of the sewage disposal plant submitted a suggested budget for the industrial chiefs' consideration, who balked at many of the figures contained in the sewage disposal survey. Irvin Leist, manager of the disposal plant, pointed out, however, that the figures he had compiled were only suggested and had been set up only to provide the industrial officials with some basis of argument.

Clarence R. Barnhart, of the Winorr plant, objected to the entire budget, maintaining that figures contained in it were "clear out of line with what canners in other cities this size are paying."

Container Willing

Representatives of the Container Corporation stated they were willing to go along on the present budget basis until a satisfactory budget could be worked out. They questioned a salary increase of $2,000 and 10 percent depreciation charges contained in the tentative budget, the total budget being about $8,000 more than last year.

Manager Leist maintained the salary increase was justified, since employes at the disposal plant had obtained considerable experience in the last year and were therefore more valuable to the plant than they were last year.

Two petitions, one signed by 18 owners of business establishments on West Main Street, and one by 12 business men and property owners on South Court Street, requested that Council take some action to stop smoke nuisances arising from defective chimneys on business establishments in their neighborhoods. The petitions were referred to the service committee.

Another petition requesting that Council take some action to provide that curbing be established by property owners on Park Street was also referred to the service committee.

On the suggestion of Councilman William Reid, Council instructed Service Director Leonard Morgan to repair street lights over the Pickaway Street bridge.

The September report of Mayor William Cady, submitted to Council, showed that last month fines amounted to $75; fees, $13.40; and bonds $305.

Safety Director Karl Herrmann announced that during September, collections for Ber- Hospital amounted to $1,154.55.

FIRE DESTROYS CLAYPOOL BARN

Route 159 Blaze Results In Loss Of Hay, Straw And Wheat

Eighteen tons of hay, a considerable quantity of straw and nearly 500 bushels of wheat were destroyed in a fire on the Garrett S. Claypool's Rainbow farm on Route 159, Wednesday night, which destroyed a $4,000 barn. No livestock was in the barn when it burned.

The fire was discovered by Miss Hazel Boden, daughter of George Boden, tenant, at about 9:50 p. m. as she was about to retire. She notified other members of the household, but by the time they dressed, the interior of the barn was in flames.

Number one pumper from the Chillicothe fire department and the pumper from Kingston fire department were called to the scene and prevented the spread of the flames to an implement shed nearby.

Mr. Claypool said the barn was partially covered by insurance. A greater portion of the grain and hay consumed belonged to Mr. Boden, he said.

H. O. McAdams, state highway patrolman, noticed the reflection of the flames in the sky and hurried to the fire to direct traffic.

CHIMP NO CHUMP

FORT WORTH, Tex.,—Fort Worth's Forest Park Zoo got the worst of the deal when it sold a female chimpanzee to the zoo at Houston. The animal was sold because it was apparently getting cranky in old age. Shortly after it arrived in Houston the chimp gave birth.

EFFORT TO KILL PESTS COULD BE ATTEMPTED NOW

The following practice in the control of dandelions in lawns, outlined in an Iowa State College bulletin, has been found to be equally effective in Ohio as it has in Iowa. Dull days such as we have been experiencing here in Circleville lately would be ideal for the application of this treatment.

The bulletin outlines the process as follows; dendelions may be killed without injury to the grass by spraying the entire lawn, under suitable conditions with pure kerosene. Three points must be strictly observed.

1—Four pints of kerosene is recommended for each 100 square feet of lawn to be treated. It is important that not more than five pints be used and that the spray by evenly distributed. Use only water white or lamp kerosene.

2—Spraying should be done between October 5th and October 20th in this area. A good general rule is 6 to 8 weeks before the average date of heavy snow or grass killing freezes.

3—Best results are obtained by spraying on a cloudy afternoon when the temperature is around 60 to 70 degrees.

Dandelions may be killed at any time with kerosene but early fall has given uniformly better results. The object of choosing the afternoon of a cloudy day is that under such conditions the kerosene does not evaporate so quickly and penetrates deeply into the dandelion roots. Do not try to use fuel oil or gasoline and be sure that the kerosene is of the quality used in kerosene lamps commonly known as water white kerosene. The grass will recover from the effect of the kerosene spray when the above dates are observed and will not winter-kill as it will if sprayed too late.

INDIAN CHIEF AT LOGAN PROGRAM

Winnesheik, Leader Of 480 Surviving Members Of Tribe, To Speak

"The Spirit of the Indian", by Chief Winnesheik, a full-blooded Winnebago, is one of the features of the annual Ohio History Day Association celebration scheduled for Sunday afternoon at Logan Elm State Park. The chief is a former Carlisle Indian athlete.

Chief Winnesheik is today the recognized leader of 480 surviving members of the Winnebago Tribe. He received his education at Carlisle Indian School, Lebanon Valley College and Penn State, all institutions located in Pennsylvania.

He was much interested in football at these places of learning and was ranked as a major football power, however, while playing football he did not neglect his preparations for later life.

At Carlisle he showed a natural aptitude for music, which later resulted in his forming an all-Indian band for a successful tour of North America, South America and Europe. He was still a student at Lebanon Valley when the United States entered the World War. He went overseas with the 89th Division, being wounded by shrapnel in the Argonne.

After the war Chief Winnesheik resumed his studies at Penn State and through contacts there and at Lebanon Valley he was chosen as one of the companions of Admiral Richard E. Byrd on his second expedition to the Antarctic in 1933.

During his spare time he has done considerable work in the field of Indian art. Some of his murals and other works are now on exhibition in museums throughout the east and middle west.

At present he is regularly employed as a metallurgist and chemist in Brooklyn, N. Y. The program begins at 2 o'clock.

DANIEL ROPER SERIOUSLY ILL IN NATION'S CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 — Daniel C. Roper, former New Deal secretary of commerce and minister to Canada, is seriously ill with pneumonia, Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, physician to the 73-year-old Democratic party stalwart, reported today.

Roper, a South Carolinian, was President Roosevelt's first secretary of commerce, serving from the inception of the New Deal in 1933 until 1938. He then was named minister to Canada to greet King George and Queen Elizabeth on their American tour. Recently he has maintained law offices in Washington.

Bloedorn said the pneumonia developed from a chill suffered by Roper a week ago today.

Members of President Roosevelt's original cabinet selections who have died were the secretaries of war and navy, respectively, George Dern and Claude Swanson; Secretary of Treasury William Woodin, and Attorney General Thomas Walsh. Woodin died after retiring on account of ill health and Walsh died before he took the oath of office.
